REPORT OF THE PRESIDENT

DEAR MEMBERS OF THE CNR FAMILY,

This has been a transformative year with record-breaking achievements for The College of New Rochelle! We began the 2015 operating year with extraordinary news: the receipt of two significant federal grants totaling $14 million from the U.S. Department of Education. These two grants—the largest in the College’s history—have revolutionized our ability to deliver outstanding educational opportunities and achieve superior student outcomes at all of our campuses and are perfectly aligned to support the priorities set forth in the College’s strategic plan.

As a College Community, we have much to be proud of and to celebrate. CNR news and headlines reflect some of our recent successes.

The College of New Rochelle...

- Becomes First Private College in Mid-Hudson Region to Earn START-UP NY Designation
- Offers Only New York Metro Area’s Early Childhood Education Master’s Degree Program with Montessori Concentration
- Wins NACUBO National Innovation Award for Developing Unique “Shared Services” Model in Partnership with Marist College
- Partners with New York Theological Seminary for Accelerated Degree Program that Offers Clear Path to Ministry
- Brings Adult Education Program to Downtown Yonkers
- Presents Second Mariano and Clara Rivera Scholarship
- Ranked 10th in New York and 86th Nationally in Washington Monthly’s 2015 Master’s Universities Category
- Named to President’s Higher Education Community Service Honor Roll for Fifth Straight Year

Once again, we have demonstrated that our greatest asset is the strength of this community and together we have achieved amazing results. Working collaboratively to meet the challenges before us, we move forward purposefully and confidently, guided by mission and compelled by our strategic plan.

A HISTORIC DECISION

While this annual report reflects the donor lists and statistics for the 2015 fiscal year, I did not want to let this opportunity pass without sharing with you a historic decision that was made by the College’s Board of Trustees in December 2015.

St. Angela Merici, foundress of the Ursulines, was a visionary leader who boldly challenged the conventions of 16th century society to respond to the changing needs of her times. Angela Merici gave this mandate to those who carry forth her mission: “Follow the ancient way but lead a new life.” In founding The College of New Rochelle, the Ursulines inspired that zeal for progressive change through a vision that combines faithfulness with courage to transform lives through the power of education.

At The College of New Rochelle, it is that same transformative vision that impels our mission, informs our strategic plan, and inspired the College’s Board of Trustees to unanimously approve the decision to expand the educational opportunities provided in the School of Arts & Sciences to include both women and men, beginning in fall 2016.

This decision was made after very careful consideration of enrollment trends, market research, and robust feedback from over 1,000 members of the College Community, including the Ursuline Community, students, faculty, staff, and alumni. In making this decision, great reverence was given to the College’s mission, rooted in its Catholic identity, inspired by its Ursuline foundation, and expressed through more than 100 years of commitment to women and educational excellence as a time-tested means to a positive and lasting impact on society. Most importantly, this change will not alter but will extend and strengthen the mission of The College of New Rochelle.

The Board was compelled first and foremost to expand the College’s capacity to bring its educational excellence and record of success to a broader range of students. Now the vast majority of young women who would not consider a single-sex college as well as the incoming young men will benefit from CNR’s distinctive student-centered Ursuline education and outstanding commitment to academic success. We are excited about the future of the School of Arts & Sciences and The College of New Rochelle. We look forward to sharing more information in the next issue of Quarterly on what led us to this decision and our plans as we transition the College to be fully coeducational.

Once again, we have demonstrated that our greatest asset is the strength of this community and together we have achieved amazing results. Working collaboratively to meet the challenges before us, we move forward purposefully and confidently, guided by mission and compelled by our strategic plan.

FOCUSING OUR FUTURE

Moving forward, The College of New Rochelle remains fully committed to academic excellence, its Catholic identity, and social justice. To secure both the College's future and to enhance our ability to prepare our students to lead rich and meaningful lives, the College has identified several funding priorities that are driven by the strategic plan. These include:

- 21st Century Academics
- Competitive and Distinctive Living and Learning Communities
- Institute for Women's Leadership and Social Justice
- Direct Financial Support Through Endowments and Scholarships

Of the 20 fastest growing careers, 15 require extensive knowledge in math and sciences. Expanding and adapting its programs in the STEM and healthcare fields, enhancing the liberal arts education with further career preparation, including experiential learning opportunities such as internships, and upgrading technology and facilities will enable the College to further distinguish itself academically. Integral to the success of our students is an environment that fosters and reinforces learning. This includes contemporizing classrooms, laboratories, residence halls, and library learning spaces.

The College will continue to cultivate ethical leadership grounded in a social justice perspective. While CNR has numerous programs and initiatives across its Schools and divisions that contribute to these efforts, plans are underway to unite these initiatives through the formation of an institute for social justice and women's leadership at the College. The institute will offer a forum to address matters of social justice, including ethical leadership, and will support and strengthen the College's mission and identity and our curriculum in women's studies and the Honors program. I look forward to sharing more about this with you as we advance these initiatives.

While CNR distributes roughly $11.9 million in tuition assistance in the form of scholarships from its own budget each year, this is not enough to adequately address students' financial needs. As a result, most students are employed full-time or part-time in addition to pursuing their studies. Scholarship assistance can greatly help to resolve these issues by reducing students' worries and financial burdens, and by eliminating or reducing the number of hours they need to work. This enables our students to dedicate more time to their studies and to participate in internships, public service, and other enriching extracurricular activities at the College, all of which promote a sense of community and contribute to students' growth and development as individuals and their marketability as future professionals.

It is through the transformative power of education that individuals emerge with depth of knowledge and critical thinking skills that enable them to work across disciplines and areas of specialization, to rapidly assimilate and synthesize complex problems, to be attuned to global concerns, and especially to understand how their interests and talents may be useful in service to society. The work of The College of New Rochelle today in each of our four Schools secures the most promising future for our graduates. The impact of a college degree on students and their families is both profound and enduring, reaching across all aspects of their lives.

I am especially grateful and indebted to each of you for your continued support which allows us to positively impact the lives of students today and in the future. Our shared goal is to see the College continue to thrive. The ongoing support of our alumni and friends is of paramount importance to our future success. Together, we move forward with great faithfulness to our Ursuline heritage, embracing the ongoing transformation of The College of New Rochelle.

Sincerely,

Judith A. Huntington

Meet the Deans

During the last two years, The College of New Rochelle has welcomed new deans to each of its four Schools, who we feature here. In addition, Tiffani Blake was named dean of students while Ana Fontoura continues in her role as dean of Gill Library. These individuals bring a wealth of expertise to their roles. >>>

We must be able to launch transdisciplinary scholars who can, with our help, weave disparate knowledge and theory together to produce new understandings of the world and of ourselves in the world.

Dr. Danielle Wozniak:

WHAT INITIALLY DREW YOU TO CNR?

I really loved being the director of the School of Social Work at the University of New England. We were innovative and growing and I was pleased to lead that growth trajectory. But I wanted a bigger challenge. I mentioned to my husband that I was going to just see what challenges were out there. I did not intend to move—I was mostly doing recognizance. Then I saw an ad for The College of New Rochelle with a picture of the Castle and the lovely campus and it felt like home to me. When I read about the school, I was deeply impressed by the articulation of a faith-based social justice mission with a liberal education. I also was very impressed that CNR had been on the forefront of innovation with adult learners and thought the model was an exceptional way of addressing social inequity.

As a small liberal arts school, CNR has an imperative to think differently about how to offer education, to think critically about what education is and should be, to be reflexive educators and through that reflexivity to be leaders in change. It's at schools like CNR that the real innovation for the 21st century will come. I wanted to be a part of that innovation.

CAN YOU BRIEFLY EXPLAIN YOUR EDUCATIONAL PHILOSOPHY?

To me, education is necessarily and exponentially transformative. Transformations emerge through teaching/learning partnerships when we as individuals are forever changed by ideas, experiences, knowledge, insights, and discourse and when we use that knowledge to shape the world around us. Inquiry inaugurates and sustains endless possibilities through the production of new knowledge that is applied, refined, and reexamined. This is important because our world rests in and depends on these moments and experiences of transformation and endless possibility; we are lifted up and connected to our humanity through these moments. Our future is ensured through them.

Our task as 21st-century educators is to provide intellectual bridges between complex and divergent theory and practice and to model and support inquiry and application. Each one of our students will apply their knowledge to real-world issues, problems, and imperatives. Our students will shape the rhythms of human life and condition larger social and cultural patterns. Thus, we must provide opportunities to weave a complex knowledge tapestry to yield competent and ethical social agents who are prepared to act on the world. This is our 21st-century liberal education imperative.

WHAT MAKES THE SCHOOL OF ARTS & SCIENCES UNIQUE?

We possess an astounding pool of brilliance. The vast majority of our faculty has terminal degrees and years of experience teaching, researching, writing, and practicing in their professions and disciplines. I also think we're unique in the relationships that our faculty forms with students. I am always astounded when they talk about their students by name. Having a small school with small classes really enables us to have these personal, supportive, and frankly, exhilarating relationships. When we are intellectually supporting and nurturing our students rather than simply walking them through a curriculum, we are at our best.

WHAT IS ONE OF YOUR FAVORITE MOMENTS AS A DEAN SO FAR?

Hands down, it was Move-in Day. I got to share the hope and excitement of students who were about to embark on one of the most important journeys of their lives. I also got to be there for parents—many of whom were struggling with the day. I was helping a student move in and I looked at her dad who was trying not to cry and said, “Did you think this day was ever going to come?” Tears welled up in his eyes and he said, “I just never thought it was going to come so fast.” I was impressed with what a momentous occasion this was not just for our students but for parents who made the decision to entrust their children to us. When a reluctant mother was struggling to let go I said, “I want to thank you for sharing your most precious possession with us.” I wanted her to know that we would value and care well for her daughter. And to students I said, “Get ready! This is going to be amazing!”

TELL US ONE THING ABOUT YOURSELF THAT MOST PEOPLE DON'T KNOW. I come from a family of 10 children. I have astounding dichotomous listening skills, so I can be engaged in one conversation and listen to at least one other going on near me. Growing up in my house, everybody talked at once. So this was an important survival skill! Coming from a big family also teaches you how to look out for each other and care for each other—to have a sense of the collective and to be responsible. I saved my youngest brother from drowning when I was in the fourth grade. My teacher made quite a lot of it, but my parents simply said I had done what a sister does.

I am also a good storyteller, another skill I learned in my early family life. My parents were both educators and they would come home very tired. I found I could revive them by making them laugh at stories about my day—making them see my teachers or my friends differently. I confess I embellished quite a bit!

WHAT SOCIAL ISSUE ARE YOU THE MOST PASSIONATE ABOUT AND HOW DOES IT FACTOR INTO YOUR WORK AS DEAN? I am the most passionate about racism and social inequity. I grew up in a time of tremendous racial upheaval in this country. I learned about the Civil Rights Movement by experiencing it—by seeing the adults around me get involved, protest inequity, and risk their lives. I feel that education is a powerful tool to remedy inequity and address the individual and systemic racism that continues to plague our country. Access to an excellent education is critical in this fight. I will do everything in my power to make sure that students have access to a quality education and that they have the tools they need to not just fight inequity, but to create a just world. I take this responsibility very, very seriously. This is my contribution to addressing injustice. This is my work.

Growing up, we were never shielded from the ravages of injustice. It was always impressed on us as children, and I impress it on my own children, that every human being who draws breath has an obligation to join with their brothers and sisters and with God to make a just world. The College's Ursuline mission is consistent with this belief and I am grateful to be a part of an institution that is dedicated to social justice and service.

DESCRIBE A TYPICAL WORKDAY AS DEAN. There isn't one, which is why I love being a dean. My work ranges from sharing a meal with students in the dining hall to troubleshooting academic policy, to considering where as a School we need to go next to be competitive and important in a crowded educational landscape, to developing internship and mentorship pipelines. Right now I'm working to focus our vision on curriculum renovation, innovation, and on who we will become as we go forward. The world hinges on our ability to produce educated students who can think critically and creatively about problems and who have the capacity to jump into the fray with excellent ideas. I approach every single day with the reverence of someone who says, “The world turns on us and our capacity to support students in the work they have to do in the next 20 to 30 to 40 years.”

WHAT IS THE BEST PIECE OF ADVICE YOU WOULD GIVE A STUDENT? Be an aggressive problem-solver. Go toward problems, lean in to conflict. When I see a student in the dean's office for various issues, the root cause is inevitably because they didn't feel they could go toward the problem. When I work out what that path is, students see what they need to do to get back on course and the issues generally dissipate quickly.

Another piece of advice is to embrace joy. It is so important to see joy in everything that we do, to take stock of it and to celebrate it. We are diminished when we don't do this. So, look for something to celebrate in each moment that is given to us; pause and say, “That was a great experience,” or “Thank you for that amazing opportunity!”

Danielle Wozniak

Dr. Danielle Wozniak joined The College of New Rochelle in July 2015 as Dean of the School of Arts & Sciences. Wozniak brings to the position more than 20 years' experience in the field of higher education. Prior to joining The College of New Rochelle, Wozniak was Director of the School of Social Work at the University of New England in Portland, Maine. During her tenure there, she was responsible for significant growth in online and campus programs. Past experience also includes various roles at the University of Montana, including Director of the Bachelor of Social Work program and Co-Director of Sexual Assault Prevention Program. Wozniak has held teaching positions at the University of Montana, Western Michigan University, Eastern Connecticut State University, University of Connecticut, and Connecticut College.

We are developing a criminal justice major, a food systems/nutrition major, a master's of social work, and we are discussing a public health major.

WHAT ARE YOUR GOALS FOR THE FUTURE OF THE SCHOOL OF ARTS & SCIENCES? My goals are that we provide not just a stellar student-centered education, but that we create a template for 21st-century thinking, acting, and innovation. This year we saw one of the biggest changes in CNR history with the decision to admit men in SAS. And it was momentous for us. But higher education makes monumental changes like this regularly. So we will need to be able to hold onto what is excellent about our tradition and identity while we learn to embrace and integrate important 21st-century academic changes.

I would like to increase professional and pre-professional offerings that emerge through and from a liberal arts foundation. This is especially so as we grow health-related fields across the Schools. We are developing criminal justice major, a food systems/nutrition major, a master's of social work, and we are discussing a public health major. These majors support our School mission in social justice. They also provide opportunities for inter-professional practice with nursing and are natural feeders to our graduate programs as our students avail themselves of the 4+1 options.

Twenty-first century education is also about fluidity. We want to make it easy for students to enter from community colleges, and if we don't have the programs we need, we want to partner with schools that can help us provide them. We're working on articulations with numerous community colleges, as well as articulating our undergraduate majors with various graduate and professional programs.

We're also developing replicable pipelines into CNR with area high schools. One example of a high school partnership focuses on increasing mathematicians and scientists through our STEM boot camp and through dual high school/CNR enrollment. Other partnerships are our high school "back pack" or hybrid courses, our school vacation programs, Saturday workshops, and online courses.

Finally, online learning can open worlds of opportunity to students, increase our recruitment area, and make a four-year degree possible for those with work or family constraints. We will develop our online and hybrid offerings not just for convenience, but for content and experiential robustness. This is especially important in our upper division courses and in programs where students are doing internships.

WHAT DO YOU SEE AS YOUR BIGGEST CHALLENGE TO ACCOMPLISHING YOUR GOALS FOR THE SCHOOL OF ARTS & SCIENCES IN THE NEXT YEAR?

Our challenge rests in our ability to be innovative and competitive. But herein also lies infinite opportunity. Both the challenges and opportunities we face are definitional for higher education. We have the opportunity to define how we approach education and how we nurture the next generation of scholars, thinkers, and workers, and reshape education while we're doing that. For example, knowledge silos mark 20th century education. From those silos we produced sociologists, mathematicians, psychologists, and biologists each with content knowledge. But very few biologists had a solid understanding of psychology. Very few mathematicians had in-depth understanding of aesthetics. The problems we face today are extensive and complicated, and our understanding of how we might solve them turns on our ability to possess not just knowledge in one area, but also breadth of integrated knowledge and methodology. We must be able to launch transdisciplinary scholars who can, with our help, weave disparate knowledge and theory together to produce new understandings of the world and of ourselves in the world.

Educational futurists predict that 50-60 percent of the jobs our children will apply for have not yet been invented. I have fun with futurists like Thomas Frey, who predict we will see professions like micro grid strategists, gene sequencers, molecular gastronomists, clone ranchers, time brokers, and space-based power system designers. While I am not planning on starting these majors just yet, I am keenly aware that future professions are not those of the past. While we prepare our students in the basics of a liberal education—to have competency in literacy, numeracy, critical thinking, and communication, we must simultaneously transform liberal education to reduce knowledge silos in favor of an integrated education that prepares students to embrace a complex future.

IN YOUR SHORT TIME AT CNR, WHAT ARE YOUR IMPRESSIONS OF THE STUDENTS?

Our students are so bright and full of promise and are such hard workers. I want to do everything in my power to support them in their educational journey. I make it a point to be out and about and intersecting with our students. I ask students every single day, “How are you doing in your classes? What’s your favorite one this week? What have you learned this week that you didn’t know before?” And nobody misses a beat. In mid-stride, they say, “Well, this week, it was biology class.” Or, “This week I got a great grade on my psychology test.” I’m thrilled that they approach their studies with such joy and engagement. It is our steadfast and undying job to nurture this passion and to feed what will become wisdom for life. ■

Dr. David Donnelly
Interim Dean,
Graduate School

Dr. David Donnelly:

WHAT INITIALLY DREW YOU TO THE COLLEGE OF NEW ROCHELLE?

I have a lot of experience with private institutions, but this is my first institution with a Catholic affiliation. I’m Catholic, so that aspect was intriguing to me. I’ve also worked in the highly competitive New York market, and I understand it.

I saw this position as a great opportunity. There are a lot of challenges facing private institutions today, but they’re challenges that can be tackled and overcome. I have built a track record of program development and revenue growth at other institutions and plan to leverage that experience in this position.

CNR’s strategic goals provide a great roadmap for the Graduate School and for me. Having those goals makes my job a little easier, because it gives me some direction. A lot of hard work went into the strategic plan before I got here in terms of laying out priorities, and I think it's important as a dean and an academic administrator to follow those priorities. CNR has a strong leadership team. The other deans and I are working together and have formed a highly collaborative approach, which is helpful to the institution. Dorothy Escibano (CNR's Provost and Senior Vice President for Academic Affairs) has been a great boss, and I have a lot of trust in President Huntington. I think it's wonderful to have a former CFO as president. And I have really enjoyed working with the graduate school faculty.

I think the trick is to communicate and collaborate, to motivate people, and retain the passion and energy you need to succeed in a challenging role.

CAN YOU BRIEFLY EXPLAIN YOUR EDUCATIONAL PHILOSOPHY?

Half of my career, I've been a faculty member and half of it, I've been a higher education administrator. I describe myself as an educator. When I was in the classroom full-time, I'd often start off a new class with an Albert Einstein quote. The gist of it was, "I don't really teach my students anything. But I create an environment where they can learn." It was really about the students doing the hard work, being engaged, not just passively listening while I lectured.

I've taught large lecture classes and I've taught seminar classes. But no matter what format I'm teaching in, my focus is student-centered learning. I'm a big fan of experiential learning as well—internships and problem-based learning. Students have changed over time, so it's really important that educators step back and think, "How do I adapt to this new generation of students?"

The faculty are still as important as they've ever been in terms of guiding the learning and working with the students. I've always been interested in innovative teaching techniques and integrating technology in the classroom. I'm involved in the scholarship of teaching. Just because technology is involved doesn't make it less personal. In fact, sometimes you can have a far more personalized interaction that's technologically mediated than you can have in certain face-to-face situations.

But still, in a residential community environment, the classroom is really important. At the graduate level, I think we have an opportunity to add some flexibility, because students are working and coming to campus may or may not always be convenient. So, I'm a big fan of hybrid models where you have a mix of the face-to-face environment where you're meeting on this great campus or at one of the campuses across New York City while doing some things online. The on-campus component of our graduate programs will continue to be an extremely important part of the CNR graduate student experience.

WHAT MAKES THE GRADUATE

SCHOOL UNIQUE? We have great depth in the Graduate School. We have a lot of options and programs within our different divisions. In our guidance and counseling and education departments, for example, we have many different degree programs and advanced certificate programs. We also have the ability to combine programs. Mental health counseling overlaps with grief counseling, which also overlaps with art therapy counseling. And so many of our programs connect.

Also, every one of our programs requires a practicum or an internship where students learn outside the classroom. And that's a really important part of the education. And, the mission of the College is embedded in everything we offer.

TELL US ONE THING ABOUT YOURSELF

MOST PEOPLE DON'T KNOW. I shaved off my beard on national television. I have a blended family, and about five years ago I was invited to be on Good Morning America when they did a "Daddy Makeover" program for Father's Day. They took me to a Park Avenue doctor, who said, "Hmm, I'm going to give you cheekbones." He

FEATURE STORY

David Donnelly

Dr. David Donnelly was appointed Interim Dean for the Graduate School in September 2015. His career in education spans undergraduate, graduate, and professional education. He started his career with the University of Houston's School of Communication, where he rose from instructor to associate professor. He later served as the Director of Continuing Education at Sarah Lawrence College, Dean of the School of Communications at Quinnipiac University, and Dean of the College for Graduate Studies at Chatham University in Pittsburgh. He has also served as a Visiting Research Fellow at the McGannon Center at Fordham University.

then injected about 30 shots of Botox with the world's longest needle. It hurt—there were tears streaming down my face! My temporary cheekbones are gone and I grew the beard back right away, but I still have a really nice cashmere sweater from the show.

WHAT WAS YOUR FIRST CAREER ASPIRATION? I was a radio, television, and film major at the University of Maryland. I wanted to do TV and film production. And I did produce and direct some documentaries. While not at the level I fantasized about when I was young, some have aired on PBS stations. Visual communication is still a passion of mine. Photography is one of my creative outlets.

DESCRIBE A TYPICAL WORKDAY AS DEAN. Some days, you look at your calendar and it's back-to-back meetings. And then the next day, I have nice, wide gaps in my calendar and I think, "Oh, I can catch up." And then I answer the phone, or read email, and end up putting out a fire. Every day is a little different.

I have a lot of experience being a dean, but at each institution, there's always a learning curve. I'm still in the learning stages at CNR. I'm still learning about some of the programs we offer, like mental health counseling and education. It's part of my job to learn about these programs, and then also to learn about how these fields are changing and how we can keep up and adapt the curriculum. Also, for me it's important to learn about the faculty and the staff. We are all on the same team, and share a commitment to enhance the Graduate School and to serve the mission of the College.

WHAT'S THE BEST PIECE OF ADVICE YOU WOULD GIVE A GRADUATE STUDENT?

"It's supposed to be hard." Periodically, I'll use the phrase, "hard fun." In other words, you're pursuing what you want. If you're in graduate school, at that point, you're a little more mature. You've had a chance to sample things, find out what you don't like, and then what you really like, what drives you, and what really gets you excited. And that's why people typically will go on to pursue a graduate education. Oftentimes they're focused on a profession and career advancement or changing careers. But they're going into something that they're passionate about.

WHAT DO YOU SEE AS YOUR BIGGEST CHALLENGE TO ACCOMPLISHING YOUR GOALS FOR THE GRADUATE SCHOOL IN THE NEXT YEAR?

Prioritization is a real challenge. I want to grow the revenue by growing enrollment while maintaining academic excellence and integrity. New York is a highly competitive market. I think one of my biggest challenges—in conjunction with enrollment management, senior administration, and faculty and staff—is to continue to articulate why students should study at the graduate level here at the College, and continue to give them a good reason for coming here. And part of it is to distinguish what we do here at CNR from our competitors. We've got great programs, great students, great alumni, and great faculty. We need to leverage and promote all of those assets.

WHAT ARE YOUR IMPRESSIONS OF THE STUDENTS IN THE GRADUATE SCHOOL?

Our graduate students are here because they want to be here. They're driven by that commitment. It's not easy—so many of them juggle multiple jobs and kids. But they're special individuals because they've come here and they've decided to take this on.

The upside of it is that they're passionate and they want to learn. The downside is it's such a challenge for many of them to juggle all these multiple commitments. We want them to succeed and live up to their full potential. Many of our graduates go on to serve the community in a variety of ways, for example, as counselors, therapists, and teachers. So the impact they have on others is significant, and the cumulative impact of the Graduate School on the community is enormous.

Moving forward, we are continually adapting our program offerings to stay abreast of the many changes in the professions and in the marketplace. And we are continually looking at some interesting additions to our offerings. For example, the new MFA in Creative Writing, which launches in fall 2016, is a wonderful addition to the portfolio of CNR graduate programs. It connects writing with our service mission and embodies a unique CNR approach and has drawn prospective applicants from around the country as well as places like Australia and Korea.

While that program and the Art Therapy Counseling Program attract a geographically diverse pool of applicants, many of our programs serve the local community, where adults can earn their degrees as they raise families and work. That is an important part of who we are. And even though the New York higher education market is crowded and really competitive, there are a lot of needs out there. We have to ensure that what we offer is distinctive and attractive, and we need to continue to build on that and promote that. Growth is a theme, but goes beyond mere numbers; we hope to grow in stature as well. ■

Interim Dean,
School of
New Resources

Dr. Kristine Southard:

YOU'VE BEEN A PART OF THE COLLEGE OF NEW ROCHELLE COMMUNITY SINCE 1991. WHAT KEEPS YOU HERE? Since 1991, I've had a variety of roles at the College. I was an adjunct instructor, then a faculty member teaching English, literature, and writing courses for about eight years. I've served as a campus director and assistant vice president for academic affairs. And in all of those roles, what always impressed me is the fact that it's a family-oriented school. The College is rooted in its mission and is truly interested in the success of the student body and committed to educating students who go out into the world in a service-oriented capacity.

The institution just has such incredible integrity in the way that everyone—from faculty all the way up to the president's office—gives of themselves. The College is diligent in assuring that we meet the standards of excellence for providing a quality education to individuals who may have not had that opportunity otherwise. We really do care if the students come to classes. It's just a whole different world in terms of the delivery of the education that we provide.

FEATURE STORY

DID YOUR WORK AS A CAMPUS DIRECTOR PREPARE YOU FOR YOUR NEW ROLE, AND IF SO, HOW? I was the campus director of the Co-op City Campus for about 10 years. As a director, you're responsible for everything from the physical plant to the academic integrity of everything that's happening on the campus, whether it's tutoring, independent studies, classes, adjunct faculty, or full-time faculty. I embraced being the person that could fix the problem or help remove the obstacle. Even though I wasn't always able to teach, I was able to continue advising the adult learners—first-time college students. I really enjoyed teaching them about what it means to be a college student and the social responsibilities that come along with being educated. I couldn't even walk to my car without somebody asking me for advice. I would say, "All right, walk with me."

I've had an opportunity to look back each time I've left a position, to really think about what that position taught me and how I would move forward. I think it's unique to have had the opportunity to be interim dean after having held so many positions in the School, so I recognize what it's like to be a faculty member and what it's like to be on a campus for 10 years and build a team. I also feel like I know the student body so well.

CAN YOU BRIEFLY EXPLAIN YOUR EDUCATIONAL PHILOSOPHY? When I was teaching, I said to my students all the time, "If it isn't hard, then you're not being challenged." I think adult learners appreciate it when you acknowledge that what they're doing is hard, but that we're not going to change the standard and the criteria that they have to meet, because that's a disservice. They're leaving college with the same degree as every other school's undergraduate body, and they have to have the tools to be competitive.

Not every semester is a great semester for every student, but there's never a time that we don't bring them back into the fold, that we don't temper academic advisement with, "So, how are your kids doing? Tell me what's happening at home. Have you figured out where your best place to study is yet?" Everything is aimed at helping the student be successful, from the way we do our schedules to the way we ask

Kristine Southard

Dr. Kristine Southard was appointed Interim Dean of the School of New Resources at The College of New Rochelle in August 2015. She has served the College and its students since 1991, when she began teaching as an adjunct faculty member, and later assumed a permanent position as a member of the instructional staff, letters. Her talents as an educator led to her appointment as Campus Director of the Co-Op City Campus in 2002, where she grew the campus into a flourishing segment of the CNR Community. In 2012 Southard brought her strengths as an academic administrator to the position of Assistant Vice President for Academic Affairs, where she was responsible for retention initiatives in each of the College's four Schools, Institutional Research, the Center for Education Policy and Practice, and the Center for Academic Excellence.

students to approach the curriculum. We ask the students on an annual basis to think about what they think may be missing in our curriculum and make recommendations for classes to be added. It works, because the majority of our students have been, in some capacity, in the workforce. Our students bring something to the table experientially that we ask them to translate into an educational process.

Many colleges and graduate programs don't acknowledge the transformative value of education on its students. We do that, and we do it in congruence with the high academic standards. One of the reasons why the School of New Resources has always been successful is because that transformative experience in education is something that students share again and again. So we get families and we get people from the same neighborhoods. They know that this is valuable, that they can go on to graduate school, that they get great jobs. They have great career paths available to them with this degree.

WHERE DO YOU SEE NEW RESOURCES A YEAR FROM NOW? We've developed a three-year plan. In the first year, I'll be doing an operational review and streamlining our offices, from reception to admissions to advisement. We also have some exciting new programs and partnerships in the pipeline. For example, we've developed the CASAC [Credentialed Alcoholism and Substance Abuse Counselors] curriculum for matriculating and non-matriculating students. Programs like this fit really well within our psychology, mental health, and behavioral health areas. We're also building Pathways 4+1 for communication between SNR and the Graduate School, which will give students the opportunity to earn both a bachelor's and a master's degree in five years.

TELL US SOMETHING ABOUT YOURSELF THAT MOST PEOPLE DON'T KNOW. I have three dogs and three cats. My house is pretty much like a farm. At one point, I had 11 cats, so I was a cat lady. I love animals, and I love having my kids around animals. And I would love to have a goat someday. I would love to make goat milk and goat cheese. In a previous life, I probably was a baker or a farmer.

WHAT ARE SOME OF THE QUALITIES YOU'VE OBSERVED IN SNR STUDENTS? They are so dedicated. I am often in awe of how much time in a day they spend traveling to class, in addition to work, child rearing, and a host of other responsibilities. When a student runs into difficulty, whether it is finances or anything else, that's when our retention efforts spring into action. Our students work so hard on their academics and every aspect of their lives; it's up to us to do our utmost to help them overcome any obstacles that stand in the way of earning their degree.

DESCRIBE ONE OF YOUR FAVORITE MOMENTS AS A DEAN SO FAR.

Recently, we held the first faculty conference, "The School of New Resources, An Adult Learner-Focused Institution: Our Traditions and Our Future." Our entire faculty and many of our adjuncts were there, and I invited our professional staff and support staff, as well as the student success directors and the dean of students. We talked about our traditions and the theories that underpin what we do. The amount of professionalism and the number of educated individuals in the room was really inspiring. We have an incredible team on every single one of our campuses. That was a great moment for me. ■

Dr. H. Michael Dreher
Dean,
School of Nursing

Dr. H. Michael Dreher:

WHAT INITIALLY DREW YOU TO CNR?

It wasn't on my radar until a friend of mine nominated me. I liked the College more and more each time I came back; the people I met were just lovely. The faculty was very interested in doing things differently. I'm naturally an innovator, and I'm naturally interested in new things, new ideas, and everyone seemed really receptive. The same was true at the senior administration level. They were looking for, I think, a dean who would get in there and work with the faculty and move the place forward, and that's not always what a president wants, believe it or not. Sometimes they want someone to come in and maintain the status quo and do things just as they want things to be done. Those were never messages I got because that really wouldn't interest me. The enthusiasm and support I felt I would get from the president and provost were very refreshing and most influential in my decision to come to CNR.

CAN YOU BRIEFLY EXPLAIN YOUR EDUCATIONAL PHILOSOPHY? I think education is the key to social mobility, but many students don't get the breaks that other kids get; parents who can afford to send them to multiple pre-SAT classes to beef up their scores and those kinds of things.

I believe in second chances—and in third chances—but I also think that at some point, you have to deliver. A nursing curriculum is hard. You have to be able to do well in anatomy, physiology, and microbiology. If you hate science, being a nurse really is an odd choice.

The philosophy of learning that I like the most is mastery learning. Before students carry out any of their decisions in clinical, we thoroughly examine and discuss the potential outcomes. That way, the instructors can ensure their safety and that of their patients.

WHAT DO YOU SEE AS THE REALLY UNIQUE ASPECTS OF THE SCHOOL OF NURSING? We have eight new faculty members who began this year. At this morning's faculty orientation, Dr. Dorothy Larkin, one of our two full professors, was talking about the conceptual framework for the School of Nursing, which is a caring-healing focus.

Our students understand that the requirements for them to practice ethically and expertly are enormous. This School really requires the extra step towards elevating the value of ethical behavior and being responsible, accountable, and truthful. That is all communicated in our conceptual framework, and we talk about it in all of our classes.

CAN YOU TELL US ABOUT ONE OF YOUR FAVORITE MOMENTS AS A DEAN SO FAR? The NCLEX, the examination students take to be licensed as a nurse, is a hard exam. When I came on board here, I was challenged to work closely with the faculty to modernize the curriculum and increase the rigor, so our students would be fully prepared for a difficult new NCLEX that was implemented nationally in 2013. We changed the curriculum policies dramatically the first semester I came on board. The faculty made very difficult decisions on increasing the rigor of the curriculum rather immediately. Our goal is to help students believe that they can do it, but also recognize that they have to earn it. They have to put the time in, particularly their last semester. There is no coasting. There is no "senioritis."

When a student passes 75 questions in the NCLEX examination, they've aced the test completely. There's not a single need to give you one more question because you've done so fabulously. So it's a great joy to see students put in the time and then drop by my office and tell me, "Dean Dreher, I passed 75 questions!" That happens a lot now. I'm not kidding. I am so happy for them and the faculty who prepared them.

TELL US SOMETHING ABOUT YOURSELF THAT MOST PEOPLE DON'T KNOW. I'm a sports addict. I even follow the sports I hate. I don't like NASCAR, but I'll often know who won the last NASCAR race because my father will ask me. I spend a lot of time watching tennis on the weekend. I'm a tennis fanatic. I wish I could be released from the burden of following politics and sports.

CAN YOU DESCRIBE A TYPICAL WORK-DAY? I commute from Hell's Kitchen in New York City. I don't drive, so the train and the shuttle bus get me here around 8:25 every morning. I have a habit of organizing myself for about 20 minutes. I do my two meditations and then head off to my executive assistant's office to get my schedule for the day. My day is full of meetings and email. Sometimes I work from home if I need to spend three solid hours writing. A lot of my projects require white papers or a proposal, so having consolidated writing time, uninterrupted, is very critical in order to help move the School and College forward. I also teach, so I'm very involved with the senior students. I finally have my full administrative team on board, my new associate dean, my new assistant dean, and so it feels good to have very important colleagues that are helping us, that are in this together, to do the work of expanding our enrollment and improving our program outcomes simultaneously. We're up 22 percent from last fall.

WHAT SOCIAL ISSUE ARE YOU MOST PASSIONATE ABOUT, AND HOW DOES THAT FACTOR INTO YOUR WORK AS A DEAN? My number one social issue is gun violence, hands down. I post on my Facebook page about a lot of really sad deaths often caused by gun owners who are negligent. It's not that I'm against gun ownership, but I'm much more in line with the Canadian system that if you own a gun, you have to go through a whole lot of loops to make

H. Michael Dreher

Dr. H. Michael Dreher brings to his position as dean, which he has held since June 2014, more than 30 years' experience as a nurse educator, including 17 years at Drexel University College of Nursing and Health Professions in Philadelphia. At Drexel, he served as Associate Director of BSN Programs and Director of MSN Programs. As the founding Chair of the Doctoral Nursing Department, Dreher developed one of the first Doctor of Nursing Practice programs in the country in 2005. This program prepared doctoral advanced nursing practice clinical scholars and included the first mandatory doctoral nursing study abroad program in the U.S.

Our goal is to help students believe that they can do it, but also recognize that they have to earn it.

WHERE DO YOU SEE THE SCHOOL OF NURSING AT THIS TIME NEXT YEAR?

This time next year, I think all the signs point to us being a school of nursing and something else, potentially health sciences. I see a couple of new non-nursing majors being offered. There are students who come into nursing who probably like healthcare, but maybe nursing is not the best healthcare profession for them. We can offer more than just nursing to the community at large. I see the nursing majors also expanding.

WHAT ARE YOUR IMPRESSIONS OF THE SCHOOL OF NURSING STUDENTS?

I think they are the face of tomorrow. I really do. The applicant pool for nursing has changed and we're seeing a lot of minorities and men. Unfortunately, Hispanics are underrepresented in nursing compared to the population. I'm very interested in doing a lot more outreach, in particular to the Hispanic high schools and populations in New Rochelle.

I'm a big believer that the individuals who make their living being a professional nurse ought to look more like the people they're taking care of. It's not in any way to denigrate the history of our profession and of the largely white women population who've served the profession of nursing most admirably. There's a history of social inequality against women as nurses and being controlled by other professions. Being autonomous and diverse and more able to work independently and to the fullest that our license gives us is very important to the profession. ■ sure you're going to be a safe gun owner. I'm a Southerner, so I grew up around guns.

There are a lot of Constitutional and legal issues around gun ownership, gun safety, and gun policy. Unfortunately we've had politicians in this country prevent the CDC from even funding research studies that look at gun violence. I find that fairly disturbing, to be honest with you. I don't think everyone has to agree with me. This is what a free country is about, but your freedom shouldn't result in another's death.

WHAT'S THE BEST PIECE OF ADVICE YOU WOULD GIVE A NEW NURSING STUDENT?

Enjoy the journey. Be authentic. Do the right thing always. Nursing is a better fit for people who want to care for people and who have the right motivation. We have this phrase that's in all of our history books: Are you called to be a nurse? I never liked that concept of a "calling," but there's some truth to that. I kind of fell into it myself, but I wound up liking it a whole lot.

INVESTING IN STUDENT SUCCESS | BY CECILIA DONOHOE

Around the country, institutions of higher education have dispensed with the notion that one type of instruction fits every student. Colleges and universities are adapting and innovating in order to complement varied learning styles and accommodate the many demands on students' time and attention. In line with this, The College of New Rochelle is in the midst of a wide-ranging initiative to support student success by addressing the needs of the "whole student." The Ursuline mission of service is, as always, at the core of CNR's efforts.

"Many of today's learners favor active, participatory, experiential learning—the learning style that many 'digital natives' exhibit in their personal lives," explained Ana Fontoura, dean, Gill Library. "Students are highly social and find great value in being with other people—they want their college experience to promote those connections as well." In addition, a large proportion of today's students must balance academics with the demands of work and family. To meet these changing student needs, the College is using funds from two U.S. Department of Education grants totaling $14 million to support teaching and learning in both traditional and technology-rich contexts.

The funds, which are comprised of a $10 million Title III grant (the largest in the College's history) and a $4 million grant from the Fund for the Improvement of Postsecondary Education (FIPSE) awarded through its First in the World (FITW) program, have helped CNR make improvements to technological infrastructure, academic support services, and counseling. The Gill Library Learning Commons and Student Success Communities (SSC) are initiatives that particularly exemplify these efforts.

Gill Library Learning Commons

In his book Libraries and Learning: A History of Paradigm Change, Scott Bennett writes, "The University library is undergoing a paradigm change from a quiet study space and book-centered repository for large collections to an information commons (or 'learning commons') where active learning can occur." With the Title III-funded construction of the Gill Library Learning Commons (GLLC) expected to open in April 2016, CNR's Gill Library is in the midst of just such a paradigm change.

To accommodate the GLLC, the library is undergoing physical changes. A connecting corridor between the Sweeny Student Center and the learning commons will allow a free flow of students between the two buildings. There will be five group study rooms, offices for the writing director and tutors, and a computer bar where students can do research, make final edits to papers, and check email. The library's third floor will be home to an integrated Math and Science Resource Center, with offices and study spaces for individual and small group tutoring, as well as a technology-rich classroom with two Sharp Interactive Display Boards, computers, and seating for up to 40 students.

The GLLC is designed to be a collaborative learning hub integrating technology, information, and educational support services providing students with both an academic environment and a physical space that reflect their learning styles and needs. The College's Center for Academic Excellence and Center for Teaching and Learning have been incorporated into the Learning Commons, making the library a "one-stop shop" for academic support services for students and faculty.

"It's taken two years of work to prepare for this," Fontoura said. "We had to do a major overhaul of our collection and withdraw books that were no longer relevant to our programs, dated, or obsolete. Our staff underwent a lot of professional development and I give them a great deal of credit for embracing this effort and recognizing that we have to adapt to the future."

The learning commons concept has also been brought to CNR's city campuses, where dedicated spaces have been set aside for librarians to collaborate with writing, math, and science tutors. "Academic libraries are taking more of a teaching and supporting role for students, not just for research but in the area of information literacy, digital literacy, and communication skills," said Fontoura. "We want to help shift students from not only being consumers of knowledge and information, but producers of new content and scholarship. Getting help with writing a paper, with critical thinking, with learning how to take their research and apply it to whatever they're doing in the classroom—that should all be happening in the library."

In addition to the Learning Commons, the FIPSE-funded program called MURAL (Mentoring, Undergraduate Research, and Augmented Libraries) enables all incoming students in the School of New Resources (SNR) to be mentored by their own personal librarian who will help them develop undergraduate research skills through the completion of a Life Arts Project—the hallmark of SNR’s program. Writing specialists at each campus also support the students’ writing skills.

“Librarians’ roles are shifting,” Fontoura noted. “They are becoming partners in the classroom. We’re not passively waiting for students to come to us; we’re partnering with faculty and going to them. Access to information is very important, as is taking that information and shaping it.”

Student Success Communities

Key to a student’s success and persistence to graduation at any college are the connections they make with caring faculty and administrators. CNR is strengthening those connections through Student Success Communities (SSC), which have been established at each of the College’s six campuses. The SSCs are aimed at enhancing students’ learning experiences by providing holistic, proactive support for first-time college students.

School of Arts & Sciences and School of Nursing students participate in the SSCs during their first year, while those in the School of New Resources stay in the program throughout their time at CNR. Students are grouped into cohorts of 25 students. Each cohort is paired with a student services case manager, who shepherds the students through their transition to the demands of college life. The cohorts also work with a specialist librarian from the Gill Library Learning Commons who manages students’ academic preparedness. Each SSC is run by a director of student success charged with monitoring student progress, designing individualized support plans, and implementing strategies to help students overcome difficulties. It’s what Dean of Students Tiffani Blake calls “a multilayered role.”

“Our student success directors are jacks of all trades,” Blake noted. “They work collaboratively with faculty and staff to problem solve, think analytically, and find ways to support the students.”

The awarded federal grants have enabled the College to invest in new technology, including the Starfish EARLY ALERT system, which student success directors, campus directors, faculty, and staff use to identify at-risk students in real time, pinpoint areas of concern, connect students with services, and assess which services and interventions will keep students on track.

“If there’s an attendance issue or if a student is behind in assignments, a flag can be raised to indicate that someone needs to follow up with this student,” Blake said. “Once we know a problem is there, whether with academics, finances, or personal or behavioral issues, a notation is made in Starfish that alerts a faculty mentor or others who can then follow up with the student if an intervention is required. It takes a lot of coordination. Some of these concerns are time sensitive, and we want to make sure to address these issues accordingly.”

The College also fosters student success through workshops that are offered as part of required introductory courses—Interdisciplinary Studies (INS) for School of Arts & Sciences and School of Nursing students, and Experience, Learning and Identity (ELI) for School of New Resources students. The workshops cover topics such as time management, communication, study skills, and note taking. SNR students also benefit from workshops in money management and career development that are tailored specifically to adults, while SAS and SN students can attend an advisement fair to learn about various majors and a wellness fair that encourages healthy eating and exercise.

Harold Wilkerson SNR’07, GS’10 earned two degrees at CNR and is now a director of student success at the John Cardinal O’Connor Campus in the South Bronx. “Any time I introduce myself to students, I tell them the position is exactly what it sounds like,” he said. “I don’t want them to feel intimidated after not being in school for 15-20 years. I help them feel that they can be successful. Plenty of students just want someone to be there for them, not just for academic concerns.”

Student success directors employ creativity when addressing student needs. At the start of the fall 2016 semester, after meeting with a student who was struggling with a health issue, Wilkerson researched support groups that he might recommend. Ultimately, however, he decided to launch a support group on campus called “Lean on Me” to provide an outlet for students struggling with any manner of difficulty. In another instance, he met with a student to offer pointers on interpersonal communication in preparation for a job fair. The student reported back that he had successfully scheduled five interviews.

“You don’t want to walk into college and feel like a number,” Wilkerson said. “It’s about more than making them feel welcome at orientation. We want to make them feel welcome the whole time they’re here. It’s the little things that help a student reach the finish line.”

Antonia Sheel was the first director of student success at CNR, and now fills that role at the Rosa Parks Campus. “It’s rewarding to be part of the foundation of the department,” she said. “Everyone is passionate about their jobs and working with the students, whether it’s helping someone with financial difficulties draw up a budget, or finding a drawstring bag for a student because his or her book bag got torn. We deal with issues that are significant to their success as scholars—and as people.”

In the first year of the program, students who were included showed an increase in both retention and GPA. As the Student Success Communities initiative continues to take root at CNR, these positive outcomes are expected to multiply. Blake noted, “The monitoring systems we use, backed by the relationships we establish, will help our students persist to graduation.”

Sharing Services Benefits Both CNR Receives National Innovation Award

Reprinted from Business Officer magazine

Business officers in small, financially strapped institutions often can't spare the millions of dollars required for highly expensive—yet necessary—major technology upgrades. So what can they do to stay current?

Leaders at The College of New Rochelle found an award-winning answer, by adopting a shared services model with nearby Marist College, in Poughkeepsie.

"The shared services model allowed us to move forward aggressively on upgrades to our website and ERP (enterprise resource planning) system," says Betty Roberts, vice president for finance and administration at CNR.

Using the model, which was recognized with an Innovation Award from the National Association of College and University Business Officers in 2015, CNR was able to upgrade the College's 30-year-old outsourced proprietary system to a new Banner-based system that now provides self-service financial management on desktops across the institution via a Web interface.

"Our student, human resources, and financial systems were not integrated," Roberts explains. "We needed to move forward in adopting an ERP model that would unify these operations. Users had no way of getting financial information unless they bombarded my office with calls for reports and analysis. Access to data needed to be in real time."

Now that the finance system and website are complete, Roberts is looking forward to the rollout of the student system in the summer of 2016 with the HR implementation to follow. The new website, which is hosted on Marist's server, was built using open source software, eliminating licensing fees.

Why Share Services?

Recognizing that technology is a driving force in the instructional methods and administrative processes of higher education, Judith Huntington, CNR's president, endorses the concept of sharing services.

"Adapting to new forms of technology is costly, complex, and an ongoing challenge for every college," she says. "A sound technology strategy is one that not only responds to the opportunities of today but also builds capacity for growth."

She believes the partnership benefits both institutions: The College of New Rochelle avoided a costly investment in hardware and additional IT staff, and Marist College expanded its partnership of institutions that could take advantage of its technical capability and excess capacity.

"We are able to leverage the expertise of Marist's technology proficiency to drive down our costs and preserve our commitment to affordability for our students," Huntington explains, "At the same time, the shared services model supports Marist College in its objective to advance in its technology leadership role in higher education. I am particularly grateful to Ellen Mooney Hancock, a CNR alumna who is also chair of Marist's Board of Trustees, for her integral role in developing this important partnership."

Compatible Collaborators

According to Roberts, CNR chose to partner with Marist for a variety of reasons: the missions of both institutions are compatible and presidents, board members, and administrators have established relationships based on mutual trust.

"Marist is committed to educational excellence, service, and community," she adds. "Because Marist has been an ERP institution for eight or more years, its leaders brought instant knowledge and capabilities. It was a good fit."

She explains that a five-year contract spells out service levels, costs for support, procedures for bringing systems onboard at a later date, financial obligations, and cost escalators.

"In shared services, you don't lose your individuality as an institution," Roberts points out. "If anything, you gain synergy. It has been an efficient, cost-saving model for us to embrace. We as business officers need to look for greater opportunities like this. We have to look for innovative ways to stay vibrant. In light of the economic situation that higher education is facing, this is the way in which we must travel if we want to be progressive and continue to flourish."

Dennis Murray, president of Marist College, agrees. "The use of shared services models is imperative to advancing technology in higher education for students in a cost effective way," he says. "It doesn't make sense for every college to invest in high-tech resources, when colleges like Marist, that have it as a core competency, are in a position to share that expertise."

CNR Celebrates Faith and Community During Visit by Pope Francis

During Pope Francis' historic visit to the United States, members of the CNR Community celebrated its Catholic heritage and identity at papal events in New York City. President Judith Huntington witnessed the pope's address to the UN General Assembly; Fr. Joseph Flynn, OFM, Cap., chaplain, concelebrated Mass with Pope Francis at Madison Square Garden, while CNR students, faculty, and staff were among the 20,000 faithful in attendance that day.

Many from CNR who attended the Mass noted that the entire experience was one of faith and community. "The long procession into the Garden was a wonderful opportunity to walk, talk, and laugh with a number of strangers who enjoyed each other's company," recalled Fr. Flynn. "I was blessed to be with those people. Once inside the arena, I was impressed with the design created to make the atmosphere a wonderful prayer space. When Pope Francis entered and walked around the main floor, it was electrifying."

"Everyone was so calm and attentive and focused on celebrating the Mass," said Laura Garrett, technical and network accounts coordinator for the Office of Information Systems. "You could hear a pin drop. One of the strongest feelings I had throughout the Mass and the following days is that it really put you in touch with where you came from, your beliefs, and your commitment to your faith. It was one of the most transforming opportunities a person could have."

Fuquan Jackson, who recently joined the College as a professional advisement specialist in the School of Nursing, felt fortunate to share in the experience with his CNR colleagues.

"I'm Baptist, not Catholic, so I didn't know the 'etiquette' of a Catholic service," he said. "But the atmosphere was one of unity and I felt as comfortable as if I were in my own church."

Fr. Flynn recalled that in his homily, Pope Francis spoke of the challenges of living in a large city and the responsibility its residents have toward the poor and forgotten. "The pope said that the people who live in the midst of smog have seen a great light," said Fr. Flynn. "Remarkably, when we exited onto the street at the end of the Mass, people were commenting about the smog/fog that engulfed us."

The students who were present at the Mass carry indelible memories of the day. "At the end, there was a standing ovation," recalled Crishonda Pritchard SAS'16. "Pope Francis was smiling as he looked out at the congregation and I could see that he wanted us to know that the cheering was not about him, but about us." An art therapy major, Pritchard noted that she is already envisioning art projects inspired by the experience.

"I left the Mass feeling very overwhelmed," said Steviann Matijevic SAS'16. "The next day I was reflecting on all the people we met from CNR who were also going to the Mass—it felt like more than coincidence. We ran into people we knew from the College at the train station. Then, when we were on the train, we were talking to people who turned out to be CNR alumnae. The pope's presence made that great sense of community possible."

"The effect the Mass has had—and continues to have—on me seems deeper than language, numinous, even," said David Goewey, an instructor in the School of New Resources. "But simple, too. It's something there that's always been there, but now I see it a little more clearly. There is a sense of responsibility to be more patient and attentive to those around me."

The impression Pope Francis left on those who encountered him was overwhelmingly one of reverence and joy. "The word that comes to me is 'sacramental,'" said Dr. Susan Conte, associate professor of guidance and counseling. "Pope Francis is a clear channel of grace; a means for those who experience him to become closer to God. He accepts others without judgment, speaks the truth, invites communion, and engenders community wherever his influence is felt. I am so grateful that he has come as a humble shepherd at this time in the church's and the world's history. We need him."

CNR Launches MFA Program in Creative Writing

Starting in fall 2016, a Master of Fine Arts in Creative Writing will be offered through the Graduate School. The program, which is distinguished by its focus on social justice, seeks writers who wish to refine their craft and exercise literary citizenship by drawing attention to often-overlooked human experiences.

Co-created by faculty members Dr. Nick Smart of the School of Arts & Sciences and Steven Hobbs of the School of New Resources, the MFA is a model of institutional collaboration at the College. "This program aligns the College mission and our strong faculty resources with the call for distinctive and diverse approaches to the MFA," said Dr. David Donnelly, interim dean of the Graduate School. "It's a great addition to our graduate offerings."

The 36-credit MFA features concentrations in fiction and creative nonfiction, with small class sizes, flexible schedules, and affordable tuition. Rigorous craft, workshop, and literature courses are taught by CNR's nationally recognized, award-winning faculty of writers and scholars. Students will also have the opportunity to learn from visiting instructors who share the belief that writing and service are a joined enterprise.

Scholarships and teaching fellowships are available, while the New Rochelle campus provides easy access to New York City agents, editors, and publishers.

The core of the program is found in its mission, which states in part, "...we believe that writing can be a noble vocation, and a cultural practice uniquely positioned to foster empathy and give voice to the voiceless. We are a supportive community of writers whose concern is for the well-being of others, rather than the self alone." To that end, literature electives stress themes of social integration of classes, races, religions, and lifestyles. Through a capstone experience, "Literary Citizenship," students serve local communities by applying their skills as artists and educators to writing service projects devised over the previous three semesters. Hobbs noted, "We want to cultivate a community of skilled and compassionate writers dedicated to the transformative power of storytelling."

Further distinctive aspects of the program include three semesters of the course "The Writer at Work," which provides an immersive experience in either craft or professional development, with instruction delivered by noted writers, scholars, or publishing industry specialists.

"Reaction to our MFA from writers, editors, and educators in New York and at national meetings has been openly enthusiastic," Smart said. "So many artists want to work toward the greater good. CNR is a pioneer in this model of creative writing instruction."

CNR Partners with New York Theological Seminary for Accelerated Degree Program

CNR has expanded its partnership with the New York Theological Seminary (NYTS) to provide clergy and religious leaders with the opportunity to earn both a bachelor's degree and master's degree through an accelerated program. Students completing the program earn a bachelor's degree from CNR and a master's degree from New York Theological Seminary, located in Harlem.

A student with no prior advanced education who completes the Certificate in Christian Ministry at NYTS can transfer 18 credits towards a bachelor's degree in the College's School of New Resources for adult learners. During the final semesters of their undergraduate education, students can complete nine credits at the master's level which can be applied to both their undergraduate and graduate programs.

The School of New Resources offers a bachelor's degree with a focus in one of the following: communications, foreign languages, letters (English literature, philosophy & religious studies), psychology, or social sciences. NYTS's graduate programs include: master's in divinity, master's in pastoral care and counseling, master's in religious education, master's in leadership and administration, and master's in youth ministry.

"This opportunity provides seasoned and new church leaders from various denominations and faith traditions with enhanced skills and tools in leadership, management, and communications to manage their communities and serve their people effectively. Many of these communities face complex challenges as they juggle resources to clothe, feed, educate, shelter, care for the sick, and serve the spiritual needs of their parishioners and high risk populations. I think this program could be a great help," said Brother Tyrone Davis, CFC, JD, director, Office of Black Ministry, Archdiocese of New York, and a CNR trustee.

Art Therapy Association Mural to Feature Work by CNR Graduate Students

A new mural in the headquarters of the American Art Therapy Association (AATA) in Washington, D.C., will feature work by two art therapy graduate students from The College of New Rochelle, Gracemarie Louis GS'16 and Ashley Boudreau GS'16.

Ashley Boudreau, Robert Wolf, Patricia St. John, & Gracemarie Louis

“The AATA invited all art therapy programs to participate in creating the mural,” explained Dr. Patricia St. John, professor of art therapy and art education at CNR. “Each program that responded—27 in all—was assigned a section of the mural to complete.”

When assembled, the mural will spell out the letters “AATA” and hang in the reception area of the association’s headquarters. The students began work in October on section A6 of the mural, which features the top of the letter “T.” Louis and Boudreau created the artwork using a mix of photography and creative digital editing. Robert Wolf, professor of art therapy at CNR, helped them transfer the image to canvas using a special printer and archival pigmented ink.

“The techniques Gracemarie and Ashley used highlight the fact that CNR has the only graduate program with a specialization in phototherapy,” noted St. John. “We were very happy to have this opportunity to showcase our program while fostering our students’ talent.”

CNR Offers First New York Metro Area’s Early-Childhood Education Master’s Degree Program with Montessori Concentration

CNR has introduced a Master’s Degree Program in Early Childhood Education with a concentration in Montessori Education. Offered in collaboration with the Center for Montessori Education|NY (CME|NY), it was the first dual program of its kind in the New York Metro Area, and one of a few in the country that offers a combined Master’s Degree in Early Childhood Education with an American Montessori Society (AMS) Credential and New York State Certification.

Montessori education is unique because it uses personalized learning programs focused on a child’s development. Children choose their work from a carefully prepared classroom environment that challenges them to explore, identify, and solve problems, and develop trust in their own abilities. The Montessori approach encourages students to engage in learning through the use of self-correcting materials rather than direct instruction, and through the development of a strong community of learners and teachers who support and celebrate differences.

“This dual program will be a resource for developing teachers to fill an upcoming shortage of certified early childhood teachers in light of the mandate for universal Pre-K in New York City. The combined training makes teachers more effective in both Montessori and traditional settings, even if they are not using Montessori learning materials,” commented Dr. Kristin Berman, associate professor of education at CNR, who helped develop the program.

“We are excited to collaborate with The College of New Rochelle to offer the only dual program in the area that will enable us to train more certified teachers who can bring this effective methodology into both independent and public schools. As of now, a Montessori education is primarily available through independent schools and preschools. This dual certification will enable more public schools to incorporate Montessori for early childhood,” said KT Korngold, CEO of CME|NY, the Center for Montessori Education|NY, White Plains, NY.

An increased demand for early childhood teachers, due to the new universal Pre-K mandate in New York City, is only one factor that makes this dual Montessori Early Childhood Master’s Degree Program even more relevant. Berman elaborated, “In the current educational climate of rote skills and high stakes testing, the Montessori method has attracted renewed interest because of its emphasis on conceptual learning, self-regulation, and executive functioning, which also align with key components of the Common Core Standards.”

Serviam Award recipients: Phillip Hankins, Kevona Jackson, CNR President Judith Huntington, & Contrina Weather

Founder's Day Highlights CNR Community's Record of Service

The founding of The College of New Rochelle in 1904 by Mother Irene Gill was joyfully celebrated by the College Community on October 22. Fr. Joseph Flynn, chaplain, told those assembled for a special Mass that the College has celebrated Founder's Day for so many years that "now it is no longer just a custom, but a tradition."

Following the Mass, the community gathered for a luncheon honoring faculty and staff celebrating service anniversaries. In addition, four students received the College's Serviam Award. In keeping with the Ursuline motto "Serviam" ("I will serve"), the awards highlight extraordinary volunteer service to family, church, school, community, or society.

"'Education for service' lies at the heart of our mission," said Elaine White, vice president for student services. "Opportunities for engagement in various forms of service can be found on all of our campuses."

The Serviam Award recipients were Kevona Jackson SAS'18, Andrea Restrepo SN'16, Contrina Weather SNR'18, and Phillip Hankins GS'16.

Jackson, who is vice president of the Black Student Union, works to achieve social justice and is particularly committed to combating poverty. Through her work at Family Services of Yonkers, she provides childcare, tutoring, and mentorship to numerous children. Restrepo is president of the Student Nurses Association, through which she organizes community service activities and promotes awareness of issues related to women's health. She is especially focused on raising awareness of domestic violence and has held events in partnership with CNR's Office of Counseling and Health Services and the One Love Foundation.

Compassion for the disadvantaged is a hallmark of Weather's service to others. She provides housebound seniors with transportation to appointments, provides food and clothing to the homeless, and has served as a foster and adoptive parent. Hankins, a committed educator, lives with the challenges of Tourette Syndrome and is a tireless advocate for children who are faced with the difficulties the condition presents. A member of the Tourette Syndrome Association for 35 years, Hankins has partnered with NYP/Weill Cornell Medical Center, the New York City Department of Education, the Bronx Defenders, and the Administration for Child Services to ensure that young people with Tourette's receive the support and services they need. — Cecilia Donohoe

CNR Educators Lead Archdiocese's Seminars at Cathedral High School

Twelve educators from The College of New Rochelle led professional development workshops at the New York Archdiocese's 7th Annual Summer Seminars for High School Educators in late summer. The College also co-sponsored the seminars, which were held at Cathedral High School in Manhattan and attended by more than 550 teachers and administrators from 35 high schools across the Archdiocese.

"We are proud to have played such an integral part in this important event, which is so aligned with our mission of reaching out and supporting the community," said Dr. Dorothy Escibano, provost and senior vice president for academic affairs. "It was particularly rewarding because it gave our staff an opportunity to share learning and knowledge in their areas of expertise and interact directly with the Catholic educational community."

This year's 54 workshops were designed to help teachers improve instruction and to provide administrators and department chairs with new insights into teacher supervision. Workshops led by CNR faculty included: "Challenges Facing Teachers and Administrators: A Holistic Approach" by Dr. Walter Sullivan, associate professor of educational leadership; "Creating an Information Literacy Course, from Concept to Syllabus to Success" by Ana Fontoura, dean, Gill Library, and Kathleen S. Mannino, reference librarian; and "Independence and Self-Advocacy" by Elaine T. White, vice president for student services, and Tiffani Blake, dean of students.

CNR Launches Yonkers Site

Dignitaries including Yonkers Mayor Mike Spano and New York State Senator Andrea Stewart-Cousins joined CNR President Judith Huntington at the launch of the College's Yonkers site at the Schoolhouse Terrace Development on Ashburton Avenue. The event, held September 23, celebrated the arrival of the first college degree program offered in downtown Yonkers.

The Schoolhouse Terrace Development, a collaboration between The Community Builders, Inc. and the Municipal Housing Authority for the City of Yonkers, includes residential housing, parking, and community facilities. The College of New Rochelle was sought out by The Community Builders as an educational partner due to its decades of experience educating adult students through its School of New Resources.

President Huntington noted that the goal of The Community Builders is to create and sustain strong communities. "That mission is one that truly resonates for us at The College of New Rochelle," she said, "because of our long history of going into neighborhoods underserved by education and making a difference in the lives of the residents of those communities."

The site offers both the School of New Resources Pre-College Academic Program (PCAP), which prepares students to pass the new, more rigorous High School Equivalency (HSE) exam, allowing them to go on to pursue their college degrees, as well as the School's nationally recognized bachelor's degree program in liberal arts—specifically geared toward the needs of adult learners. In his remarks, Spano noted that through these programs, "The College of New Rochelle is contributing to the economic renaissance currently underway in the City of Yonkers."

City Councilman Michael Sabatino, City Councilman Chris Johnson, and New York State Assemblyman Gary Pretlow also spoke in support of the College's new initiative. "When people think of Yonkers," said Johnson, "they think of the first district; they think of Warburton Avenue and the Riverfront. And now, they'll think about The College of New Rochelle."

President Huntington expressed the hope that this venture is the beginning of a long and successful partnership between The College of New Rochelle, The Community Builders, and the City of Yonkers. "We are delighted to have this opportunity to expand our educational offerings to benefit the residents of Yonkers and to be a part of the revitalization of the downtown area," she said. "We look forward to contributing to the academic and professional development of students who will work in the area and beyond."

CNR Celebrates Commencement 2015

The threat of stormy weather was no match for the high spirits of the newest CNR graduates celebrating the College's 108th commencement exercises at the Beacon Theater in Manhattan on May 19. As friends and family cheered, more than 900 students from the School of Arts & Sciences, School of Nursing, Graduate School, and School of New Resources strode across the famous stage to take their diplomas and their places among CNR's more than 50,000 proud alumni.

During the ceremony, special honors were bestowed on Ellen Mooney Hancock SAS'65, a nationally recognized technology leader, who received an honorary Doctor of Humane Letters; and Lillian Roberts, the recently retired Executive Director of District Council 37 union, who received the Sister Dorothy Ann Kelly, O.S.U. Woman of Conscience Award.

Presenting the honorary degree, President Judith Huntington lauded Hancock, who has held leading positions in several highly recognized technology companies, including IBM and Apple, for being a leader in the field of technology and for imparting her remarkable vision on countless individuals who have benefited from her work. "Ellen's devotion to the field of technology has inspired and empowered others to push the boundaries of mediocrity and follow her into the realm of excellence," said Huntington.

A devoted and generous supporter of her alma mater, Hancock, along with her husband, Jason, dedicated the Mooney Center on the Main Campus in 2000. Named for her parents, Helen and Peter Mooney, the building houses technology-rich facilities, including Smart classrooms, computer labs, and a television studio.

Accepting her honorary degree, Hancock addressed the graduates, sharing with them her experiences as a CNR student, including the hard work, lasting friendships, and her role models. Advising them to exercise ethical behavior in all their future endeavors, she offered, "All of your actions are important. All of your words have meaning and consequences.

Therefore, manage them carefully. Your education here at CNR in the classics, philosophy, ethics and the arts gives you a platform of moral strength to deal with your future."

The first woman Executive Director of District Council 37, New York City's largest public employee union, Lillian Roberts was this year's recipient of the Sister Dorothy Ann Kelly, O.S.U. Woman of Conscience Award. Established in recognition of Sr. Dorothy Ann's 25th anniversary as president of CNR, the award honors a woman who embodies the exceptional combination of compassion, conviction, values, and vision.

A staunch advocate for accessible and affordable education, Roberts was instrumental in the establishment of the DC 37 Education Fund, the largest union-based adult education program in the country that brought education to the lives of more than 125,000 public workers and more than 50,000 retirees in New York. "It was as a result of Lillian's unparalleled insight and undeterred resolve that a unique partnership between District Council 37 and the College led to the establishment of the School of New Resources DC 37 Campus in 1972, a four-year degree program that is now the paradigm for unions nationwide," said Huntington.

Addressing the audience and the DC 37 Campus graduates among them, Roberts said, "In the 60 years that I have worked for labor, I have never been so fulfilled as I am to see you realize the dream I've always wanted – a college degree." Echoing her fellow honoree's advice, Roberts added, "You can do great things. I urge you to conduct yourselves in such a way that those who follow will be proud, and they will do great things, as well."

The ceremony closed with heartfelt congratulations to CNR's best and brightest – the graduating Class of 2015.

I-4 Conference Highlights STEAM Education

The College of New Rochelle and The Maxine Greene Center for Aesthetic Education and Social Imagination hosted the third annual Imagination, Inquiry and Innovation Institute (I-4) conference on October 3. This year's theme, "STEAM Towards Equity," exemplified best practices in STEAM (science, technology, engineering, arts/aesthetics, and mathematics) that support equity in race and culture, economics, gender, and accessibility.

More than 100 artists, social workers, and educators—including CNR alumni—attended the conference, which featured panels, presentations, interactive workshops, demonstrations, and exhibits. Georgette Yakman, founding researcher and creator of STEAM education, delivered the keynote address, "STEAM Education for an Equitable and Sustainable World."

The I-4 conference is influenced by the teachings of education theorist Maxine Greene, who promoted the arts as a fundamental learning tool during a 50-year career at Teachers College, Columbia University. "The connection to Maxine Greene was a huge draw for people interested in aesthetics," noted Dr. Ruth Zealand, professor and chair of education in the School of Arts & Sciences. Zealand, who chaired the conference planning committee, added, "Pockets throughout the US are moving toward this educational philosophy and we feel like we're really at the forefront."

Holly Fairbank, executive director of the Maxine Greene Center, noted, "People like Steve Jobs realized the importance of arts and aesthetics in technology. He believed that if we're thinking in 21st-century terms, we've got to include the arts in our work."

Workshops reflected the influence of STEAM education on a wide range of fields, as well as its great potential. Popular sessions included "Hip-Hop, Technology, and Today"; "Turning Students into Social Inequality Change Agents: An Innovative Approach"; "The Art of Making Books"; and "Storytelling and Narrative: Combining Aesthetics and Healthcare." The day ended with a comic performance titled "Wild Hare/Hair: Research with a Foolish Flair," which tied the day's learning together with humor.

“Have You Ever Wondered?”

Event Highlights Academic Environment at CNR

Seventy-five high school students and their families visited The College of New Rochelle on November 14 for an event designed to provide them with a taste of college-level academics. Presented by the School of Arts & Sciences and the School of Nursing, “Have You Ever Wondered?: The College Experience” offered 14 sessions on topics ranging from mental illness to entrepreneurship to the Arab world and beyond.

Students attended up to three classes, which were led by faculty from disciplines throughout the College. The schedule included “Are You the Next Andy Warhol? Making Monoprints,” led by Dr. William Maxwell, professor of art; “Shocking! What Happens to Your Brain When Lightning Strikes?” by Dr. Lynda Shand, associate professor of nursing; and “Sharknado: What is it Like to Dissect a Shark?” by Dr. Melanie Harasym, associate professor of biology.

“It was a fantastic opportunity for the high school students to learn from our dynamic faculty,” said Michael DiPiazza, director of undergraduate admission. “They really brought their ‘A game’ to each presentation, which I believe showcased the academic environment at CNR very well.”

Dr. Amy Bass, director of the Honors Program and professor of history, conducted the session “Going for the Gold on a Global Stage: Why the Olympics Matter,” in which she explained how Olympic athletes and events influence and are influenced by the social and political movements of their time.

The session “Pretty in Pink? Do Girls Really Like Pink?” was led by Dr. Roblyn Rawlins, associate professor of sociology, who discussed how so many pink toys for girls has led to a prevalence of strictly gendered play. “Boys and girls are increasingly not playing together,” she noted. “And when they live in separate worlds, this is not good for anyone because they don’t learn about getting along. Boys start thinking girls are completely different human beings and vice versa.”

Dr. Nick Smart, professor of English, presented the session “Is Katniss Everdeen Real?” in which the class examined the devices both author and readers use in creating the Hunger Games character. “Metaphors proliferate in our speech. They structure and organize our thinking,” he explained. “Katniss becomes a metaphor of our hope, our need for a heroine. When words combine with readers’ intentions, a new, and real presence enters the world of consciousness.”

Natalie Betances, a sophomore at the Academy of Mount St. Ursula in the Bronx, said she is interested in CNR’s education program. “I enjoyed this class because I like literature in general and how you connect it to your own life,” she noted. “I also attended the classes on the Salem witches and the Olympics. They were all amazing.” — Cecilia Donohoe

CNR Appoints New Director of Athletics & Wellness Center

The College welcomed Jay Butler as the new director of athletics in the fall. Butler comes to CNR from the College of Mount Saint Vincent where he was director of athletics and recreation. There, he worked with student athletes and managed the day-to-day operations of a 15-sport NCAA Division III program.

“In his previous positions, Jay Butler demonstrated a clear understanding of student-athlete needs through his attention to class attendance and GPAs, work with SAAC (Student Athletic Advisory Committee), and leadership of community service efforts,” said Elaine White, vice president for student services.

“All the work we do is designed to provide an outstanding experience for our student athletes. While we all want to win titles and provide athletic outlets, our overriding focus is to develop successful student athletes. At CNR, an important part of our competitive strategy will be encouraging leadership, teamwork, service, and personal growth,” explained Butler.

Previously, Butler was the assistant director of athletics at Hood College, where he also was head coach for women’s basketball and men’s and women’s tennis. He also served as Coaches’ Ministry Director, where he led a coaches’ ministry in five school districts in Ruston, LA, and coached women’s tennis and basketball at several schools, including Louisiana Tech University, St. Mary’s College of Maryland, and Brown University.

CNR Claims HVIAC Women's Volleyball Championship

The women of the top-seeded CNR Volleyball Team are champions once again, after winning the 2015 Hudson Valley Intercollegiate Athletic Conference Championship in October, defeating the Culinary Institute of America by a 3-0 margin. The win marks the third straight league title the Blue Angels have brought home to New Rochelle.

TIFFANI BLAKE NAMED DEAN OF STUDENTS

Tiffani Blake, a CNR alumna who most recently served as special assistant to the president for mission and board relations, has been appointed Dean of Students. Blake has held continuously progressive positions of responsibility in student life at CNR, including associate director and director of student development.

In her new role, Blake directly supervises areas and programs that enhance student engagement and campus life including: student activities, residence life, health and wellness initiatives, orientation, student leadership, judicial affairs, and commuter student services.

She also plays a leadership role in the coordination of student success communities for new students (see page 16 for more information on the student success communities).

As a CNR student, Blake implemented new student orientation and was hired upon graduation to work under the vice president for student services, where she learned the operations of the division. During her work in student development, she was responsible for developmental programming, and successfully managed student crises. Blake also adjudicated student code of conduct violations and implemented living-learning communities in the residence halls, as well as provided instruction in the first-year lab course for the past two years.

She holds a bachelor's degree in psychology from CNR and two subsequent master's degrees: the first in psychology from Baruch College, and the second in higher and post-secondary education from Teachers College of Columbia University.

Emphasizing Service to Others, Mariano and Clara Rivera Present Scholarship at CNR

New Rochelle Mayor Noam Bramson; Dorothy Escibano, provost and senior vice president for academic affairs; Gianella Solorzano SAS'19; Clara Rivera, & Mariano Rivera

Yankees great Mariano Rivera and his wife Clara visited The College of New Rochelle on September 25 to join CNR Provost Dorothy Escibano in presenting a scholarship in their name to Gianella Solorzano SAS'19, a freshman in the School of Arts & Sciences. Also at the event were New Rochelle Mayor Noam Bramson, City Manager Charles B. Strome III, and New Rochelle High School Principal Reginald Richardson, along with CNR faculty, staff, and students.

The Mariano and Clara Rivera Scholarship covers tuition and room and board for four years of study at the College. It was awarded to Solorzano in recognition of her academic record, involvement in her church, and leadership in starting a high school anti-bullying club in affiliation with the Anti-Defamation League's "No Place for Hate" initiative.

Escibano noted that the College has partnered with the Riveras on several charitable initiatives, including a backpack giveaway to 500 New Rochelle school children in early September. "Many people know Mariano Rivera as the greatest closer in baseball," she said, "but at The College of New Rochelle, we have had the privilege to know him and Clara as extraordinary models of charitable work who are both determined to impact society by helping those less fortunate."

Rivera, who received an honorary degree from the College in 2014, praised Solorzano's accomplishments and spoke of his confidence in her future contributions to the College and the community. "It's a blessing to see youngsters involved in the community," he said. "Clara and I come from poor families and were happy with what we had. Now, our passion is to do everything that we can to share with others."

Mayor Bramson hailed the Riveras' strong commitment to the city of New Rochelle, including their support for the New Rochelle Fund for Educational Excellence, the New Rochelle Library, and the CNR scholarship. Addressing Solorzano, he said, "You have an enhanced opportunity to really be who you were meant to be. Your work will be a gift to the rest of us in New Rochelle."

Following the scholarship presentation by the Riveras, Solorzano discussed her CNR experience. "Before I started at CNR, I met with faculty and students to see if I'd be comfortable here," she said. "Everyone was so friendly. Now it feels like home." She plans to continue her work with "No Place for Hate" and hopes to start a chapter on campus. "It's important to educate others that one person can make a difference." — Cecilia Donohoe

CNR Hosts Events in Support of State Initiatives

In recent months, CNR hosted two events in support of New York State initiatives – a roundtable with NY State Lieutenant Governor Kathleen Hochul and the first public meeting of the Governor's Common Core Task Force.

Governor Andrew Cuomo's "Enough is Enough" statewide campaign to combat sexual assault on college campuses was the focus of a highly informative discussion held in Leland Castle by New York Lieutenant Governor Kathleen Hochul.

In an exclusive meeting with CNR students, faculty, and administrators, Lt. Governor Hochul spoke about the need to raise awareness of sexual assault on campuses, educate students about the Governor's important new prevention policies, and petition lawmakers for passage of the legislation.

The Enough is Enough legislation, which was approved in July, requires the same safeguards, already active on SUNY campuses, in place at all colleges and universities statewide. The key elements of the prevention proposal stress the importance of a uniform policy on all college campuses to align expectations and ensure consistent enforcement.

"Consistent statewide prevention and response policies are important elements of the Governor's plans designed to provide a safe learning and living environment," said CNR President Judith Huntington. "We are extremely proud to have had the opportunity to engage in a dialogue about Governor Cuomo's important initiative to prevent sexual assault on college campuses."

The amnesty and affirmative consent policies outlined in the legislation particularly resonated with students. "The amnesty aspect is so important for students who need to know that there will be no repercussion if they come forward with information about a sexual assault," said CNR student Tish Manderson SAS'15.

In reference to the affirmative consent policy, Claudia Benitez SAS'16,

Acclaimed Writer José Ovejero Instructs and Enlightens at CNR

The Spanish writer José Ovejero visited CNR on November 5 for a series of events sponsored by the Westchester Consortium for International Studies (WCIS), a partnership of the International Studies programs at CNR and Manhattanville College. Winner of the 2013 Alfaguara Novel Prize, one of the most prestigious Spanish-language literary awards, Ovejero presented a creative writing workshop and evening lecture at CNR.

Ovejero's visit was arranged through the efforts of Dr. Nereida Segura-Rico, associate professor of Spanish, and Dr. Anne McKernan, CNR representative to the WCIS and retired associate professor of history. "Bringing artists of such stature to CNR is beneficial to students and the institution," noted McKernan. "Experiencing the writer describing and illustrating his process of 'making' enhances critical thinking and the will to write. With the tools of access, students will practice the art. There is nothing so powerful as experiencing and interacting with the celebrated writer in person."

José Ovejero led a creative writing workshop for students.

On Thursday afternoon, students from literature and creative writing classes taught by Dr. Nick Smart in the School of Arts & Sciences and Steven Hobbs in the School of New Resources attended a creating writing workshop with the acclaimed writer. Ovejero led the students through exercises designed to heighten their awareness of the many functions served by dialogue. In one of the exercises, students conducted an analysis of dialogue from a scene from the film Miller's Crossing.

Later in the evening, he gave an address titled "Spanish Fictions" in Romita Auditorium, in which he discussed his struggle with his Spanish identity under the dictatorship of Francisco Franco and his decision as a young man to leave the country of his birth. He recalled, "I hated the flag and the national anthem, symbols of a Spain that was proud of things that did not exist: fraternity, well-being, justice."

After Franco's death, Ovejero said he was skeptical of the praise lavished on Spain for its nonviolent transition to democracy. "One-third of the members of Parliament were from Franco's government," he said. "Some of them had signed death sentences or were responsible for brutal police repression." Because of his experience under the ultranationalist regime, he noted that he has kept "a perhaps exaggerated mistrust towards collective identities...I think it's very useful for every citizen to reflect a bit on the fictions of your own country. Are we hiding something behind democratic values and public discourse?"

"I was captivated by José Ovejero's account of post-dictatorship Spain," said graduate student Derri Trotman, who attended the lecture with her "Writing for the Media" class. "I hung on every word, fascinated by his version of the 'real' Spain, and found his tale to be interesting and incredibly informative." — Cecilia Donohoe

Student Government Association President, said, "Men and women need to know they have a right to say no."

The Common Core Task Force launched earlier this year by Governor Andrew Cuomo held the first of 12 public sessions at CNR in October. Task force members, led by Richard Parsons, chair, gathered before a large audience in Maura Hall to hear presentations from five panelists about their findings regarding the implementation of the Common Core standards and standardized testing.

"We're extremely pleased that the governor's office chose to host the first public forum on this important subject here at The College of New Rochelle," said Dr. Dorothy Escribano, provost and senior vice president for academic affairs.

"This evening's presentations were enlightening and thought-provoking. As educators and parents ourselves, we appreciate that the governor has recognized the very clear issues that have been raised regarding the implementation of the Common Core in New York State. The College has educated thousands of teachers and school administrators and we are grateful to the task force for providing this opportunity today for public input on improving the quality of education in all our schools."

STUDENT PROFILE: VIVIAN ROSARIO SNR'17

During her time as a student at The College of New Rochelle, Vivian Rosario SNR'17 has combined two of her interests—travel and working with children—to help make a difference in the world.

A family associate with the New York City Department of Education, Rosario works with families living in temporary housing. “Nothing is really stable for them, so we try to make the transition for the children as easy as possible,” she said. “I work to keep them in the same school by assisting with enrollment, obtaining school supplies and MetroCards, and monitoring their attendance.”

In 2014 she decided to enroll in the School of New Resources, which she attends at the DC-37 Campus. “My job gives me early release time to attend classes, and I take full advantage of it,” she said. “I always wanted to go back to school, but I’m a single mom and was waiting for my daughter to get a little older. Now my goal is to graduate before she goes to college.”

Rosario recalls walking in a hallway at the DC-37 Campus and seeing a poster for a Plunge community service trip to Haiti, sponsored by the College’s Office of Campus Ministry, the Office of Black Ministry of the New York Archdiocese, and the not-for-profit organization Zanmi Sasye. She leapt at the opportunity, and in March 2014 headed to the rural village of Sassier in western Haiti, where she helped establish the library at College Pierre Toussaint, a secondary school. “We didn’t take classes, but to me it was similar to study abroad,” she noted. “I loved the opportunity to travel with the School because you learn so much about the country and the culture. It was a life-changing experience.”

After the Plunge, Rosario facilitated a book drive to donate additional books to College Pierre Toussaint and has returned to Haiti twice on her own. “It was difficult for me to return to Sassier because the location is so remote, so I went to Port-au-Prince,” she said. “One of the students I met in Sassier who was attending university there helped me arrange to visit an orphanage and donate clothing, school supplies, and toys. Every time I go, I try to do some kind of service work.”

In acknowledgement of her contributions, CNR presented Rosario with the Ursuline Student Service Recognition Award in January 2015. “It was a wonderful day for me,” she said. “My whole family attended.” Since then, she has continued to pursue travel and service. In the summer of 2015, she visited Brazil for ten days as part of a class, “The African Diaspora in Brazil,” and she plans to visit Haiti again in April 2016 with her daughter.

“Children in this country are so privileged,” she noted. “It’s important for them to see beyond their own experience. This time they’ve said the children really need shoes, so we’re going to bring as many pairs as we can.”

Rosario’s plans for the future are geared toward helping others. “I want to continue my education and go for a master’s degree, perhaps in counseling, and to continue my global service work,” she said. “It’s opened so many doors for me.”

We Remember

Irene Mahoney, OSU

Sr. Irene Mahoney, professor emerita of English, passed away on May 9, 2015. An alumna of CNR (Class of 1941), Sr. Irene (formerly Mother Denis) was known as an outstanding teacher and a dedicated writer. She was professor of English at CNR from 1946-1959 and from 1962-1980. Since 1983, Sr. Irene was a freelance writer, whose books included biographies, plays, essays, and fiction. She also served as archivist to the Ursuline Province.

Sarah Niles Leonard

Ursuline educated at both The Ursuline School and CNR, Sally Niles Leonard, who passed away on June 1, 2015, taught briefly after graduation (Class of 1951) and then returned to her alma mater in 1954 to begin a long and storied career of service as a member of CNR's College Advancement team, retiring in 1990. Her senior Annales quote captures her generosity and realism: "Sally has a unique desire to help others, and the ability to make that desire come true." Sally was a proud recipient of the Angela Merici Medal and a devoted and generous friend to the College.

Barbara McManus

A graduate of CNR (Class of 1964), Barbara McManus passed away on June 19, 2015. Barbara joined the SAS Classics Department in 1967, and during her long career at CNR, which spanned more than 30 years, she introduced innovative courses in classics, comparative literature, and women's studies and directed the SAS Writing Program. She received many professional awards in recognition of her outstanding achievements, including the Distinguished Service Award from the American Philological Association; the named Barbara McManus Award for the Best Published Article in Gender Studies from the Women's Classical Caucus; and the Barbara F. McManus Leadership Award from the Classical Association of the Atlantic States.

Adelaide Thomason, OSU

Sr. Adelaide Thomason died peacefully on August 21, 2015, following a long illness. A native of Dallas, Texas, she was to her fingertips, a Southern lady. Sr. Adelaide entered the Ursulines in 1939 and earned her undergraduate degree from CNR in 1945. Adelaide's lifelong ministry was education, and she was a dedicated and gifted teacher. After teaching philosophy in SAS from 1960 to 1992, she joined the instructional staff of SNR until her retirement in 2006. In 1980 and from 2004-2007 Sr. Adelaide was a representative to the United Nations for the NGO International Federation of Catholic Universities.

Douglas Craft

An artist and teacher, Douglas Craft died on October 14, 2015. Doug first came to CNR in 1970 as an already established and experienced artist and art professor (Art Institute of Chicago, Carnegie-Mellon, the School of Visual Arts and Cooper Union, among others).

Primarily a teacher of painting, Doug also taught design and drawing and mentored many young women artists at CNR. Described as an artist's artist, he served on the Board of the Castle Gallery while widely exhibiting his work nationally and internationally.

Neil Cronin

Neil Cronin, who passed away on January 9, 2016, came to CNR as dean of the recently founded School of New Resources in 1977. A former Fulbright scholar who had most recently served as president of Berlitz Schools of Languages, he brought a wealth of experience to his role. After four years as dean, Neil became special assistant to CNR President Sr. Dorothy Ann Kelly, OSU until 1983.

Anne Bunting, OSU

Known as Mother Marie de Chantal, Sr. Ann Bunting died on November 3, 2015. A graduate of CNR (Class of 1949), she joined the College's faculty in 1959, where she taught European history until her retirement in 1994.

An unforgettable presence, both in and outside the classroom, who participated fully in the life of the College, she developed and taught a full range of classes, including Russian history, and twice led student trips to Russia. Active in the development of the Honors Program, she also often incorporated women's studies into her courses. Sr. Anne was equally generous in her service to the students, serving as class advisor to several classes, as well as advising the 'Day Students' and the Council of Students, and serving as dean of students from 1969-70. No less devoted to her role as faculty colleague, she chaired the History and Political Science departments, and served on numerous committees, including the Honors Committee, and the Council of Faculty, as well as chair of the College Senate.

DEAR GRADUATES AND FRIENDS,

Since 1904 The College of New Rochelle has been defined by an enduring commitment both to its Ursuline heritage and to excellent educational programs. Thousands of graduates have benefited from an education that provides wisdom for life. On behalf of the Board of Trustees, students, faculty and staff, it is my pleasure to thank you for your continued support of our mission and for the difference each of you makes in the lives of our graduates and current students. In its many forms, Serviam is alive and well within our CNR Community which makes me very proud and truly grateful.

Gifts to the College are a vital resource for our students and help us continue to move forward and grow. Your generosity makes exploration possible, critical thinking achievable, and dreams reachable. In 2015, the College received nearly $7 million in support from individuals, corporations, foundations, and through government grants.

Our students are especially grateful to all of you who collectively provide millions of dollars each year to make it a little easier for them to study and grow intellectually, spiritually, and socially. More than 1,100 contributions came from our Fidelis Society, those of you who have been dedicated, consistent contributors to the Annual Fund for 10 years or more at all levels. You are the cornerstone of our Annual Fund. And our President's Circle members – this extraordinary group of women and men – extend their generosity in ways well beyond the $2 million they provide every year for the benefit of our students and faculty. Thank you!

Much progress has been made in the past year as we implement our strategic plan and make the best use of the resources you have provided along with the influx of capital from the two grants we received in late 2014.

The pages that follow list the CNR family of donors who continue to make a lasting difference in service to all CNR students and faculty. We look forward to another year that is filled with your continued involvement and steadfast support. Thank you again for your thoughtfulness and generosity.

Sincerely,

An Evening with Mariano Rivera

The College of New Rochelle welcomed nearly 100 guests to an evening with baseball's greatest closer, Mariano Rivera, on Thursday, May 7, 2015. The event was hosted by Lesley and John Nicholson at their home in Greenwich, Connecticut. At the event, Mariano spoke candidly about his career and family during an interview facilitated by CNR Trustee, Leo J. O'Donovan, SJ. Proceeds benefited the College's academic and leadership scholarships which include the Mariano & Clara Rivera Scholarship.

PARTNERS FOR EXCELLENCE GIFT SOCIETIES

Partners for Excellence is a College-wide effort to engage students, faculty, staff, graduates, and friends in a meaningful and mutually beneficial relationship to provide for the current and future health of the College. Financial support is one critical cornerstone of a strong and vibrant learning community.

We thank all our partners for excellence who so generously and consistently support the College, its mission, and most importantly its students.

Donor recognition societies were created to express our deep appreciation to our most generous and loyal donors via special listings and membership in the St. Angela Society, Mother Irene Gill Society, and the Fidelis Society.

ST. ANGELA SOCIETY

($1 MILLION+ LIFETIME GIVING)

St. Angela Merici is the foundress of the Order of St. Ursula, and in the original charter of 1906, our Ursuline foundresses named CNR the College of Saint Angela in remembrance of her forward thinking inspiration. Since then, the history of St. Angela and her legacy have been kept alive through the vitality of the mission of the College. On the New Rochelle campus we are reminded of her by the name of Angela Hall and by a life-size bronze statue of her. Each January, we celebrate the Feast of St. Angela on all the campuses.

With profound gratitude, we recognize these donors whose cumulative lifetime giving to all funds has provided foundational and transformational support for the growth and development of The College of New Rochelle.

MOTHER IRENE GILL SOCIETY

($500,000 – $999,000 LIFETIME GIVING)

Mother Irene Gill (1860-1935), recognized for her leadership skills and commitment to the education of women, was a religious leader, academic administrator, and founder of The College of Saint Angela (changed in 1910 to The College of New Rochelle). Under her leadership, the College became the fifth Catholic women's college in the country and the first in New York State.

The College is extraordinarily grateful to the following donors whose cumulative lifetime giving to all funds has generously supported the College for so many years, providing critical funding for CNR's growth and expansion.

The President's Circle Annual Fund Leadership Gift Society

Membership in The President's Circle—CNR's most prestigious Annual Fund donor recognition society—is granted to donors whose gifts to the Annual Fund total $1,500 or more each year (July 1 to June 30). Matching gifts are included in the donor's gift total.

Leadership gifts are critical to the financial health of the College and can be used where the need is greatest or where the donor requests their contribution to be used. These contributions provide for an academically rich educational experience.

In 2015, 215 members of The President's Circle gave more than $2,412,000 to the Annual Fund. With great appreciation, we thank these graduates and friends and welcome them into one of the following President's Circle donor recognition societies.

ANNUAL FUND GIFT SOCIETIES

Gifts to the Annual Fund are used to meet the College's greatest current needs—items not covered by tuition, but necessary to a CNR education. Giving to the Annual Fund is one direct way to be a 'partner for excellence' and help the College and its students.

Your partnership at any level of giving will make a difference, ensure CNR's future, maintain its tradition of excellence in education and create opportunities. We are particularly grateful to the following members of our Annual Fund donor recognition societies.

MESSAGE TO ALUMNAE/I

Dedicated, hardworking and visionary people have brought The College of New Rochelle through a century of excellence in education. For the College to continue as a vibrant, thriving institution, it is our alumnae/i who will allow us to realize our hopes and aspirations for the future through their presence, wisdom and partnership. Our alumnae/i are living examples of the mission of CNR and it is your investment in CNR that will ensure all students will have access to wisdom for life.

THANK YOU!

The College of New Rochelle thanks its many graduates and friends who have remembered the College in their estate plans. If you have done so and would like to be enrolled in our Heritage Society, please call Eileen Niedzwiecki, Major Gifts & Planned Giving Officer at (914) 654-5240 or email at eniedzwiecki@cnr.edu.

Other Gifts

In addition to gifts to the Annual Fund, the generosity of our alumnae/i, and friends is expressed through other gifts to the College: restricted gifts for special purposes or programs, gifts in-kind, estate gifts and capital gifts. We also receive funding from state and federal government programs along with corporations and foundations in support of CNR initiatives and ongoing programs. Corporate matching gifts provide an additional significant source of revenue. We are ever grateful to our donors who take advantage of them to benefit the College.

THANK YOU!

The College of New Rochelle thanks its many donors listed in this report who made contributions between July 1, 2014 and June 30, 2015. If we have inadvertently misspelled your name or if your name has been omitted, please accept our apologies and call Jennifer Mahoney, Director of Annual Giving, at (800) 474-4232 or email at jmahoney@cnr.edu so the correction can be made to our records.

WELLNESS CENTER CONTEMPLATION GARDEN PAVERS

Cast your memories in stone and support the College so generations of new students can build their own memories here. Pavers are a wonderful way to show your support for The College of New Rochelle and create a lasting remembrance or recognition of a graduate, current student, faculty/staff member, loved one, or friend. The paver will be placed in the walkway adjacent to the Contemplation Garden at The Wellness Center.

We thank the following donors for their contributions to this special walkway.

Make a Gift of Appreciated Stock to the College

Gifts of cash are always welcome, but there are other excellent ways to make a donation to the College. One of the easiest and most tax-efficient methods is to use appreciated stock.

Giving stocks, bonds, and mutual fund shares that have increased in value (and that you have owned for more than one year) provides greater tax benefits than donating cash, so your gift dollars go further and have more impact.

You are allowed to take a tax deduction for the full market value of the securities—up to 30% of your adjusted gross income—and avoid paying capital gains tax on the appreciation.

The more appreciation the securities have, the greater your tax savings will be. With the stock market reaching record highs in recent months, now may be the time to make a gift that benefits both you and CNR!

For information, contact Jennifer Mahoney, Director of Annual Giving, at (914) 654-5917 or jmahoney@cnr.edu

The purpose of this information is to provide accurate and authoritative information of a general nature only. The College of New Rochelle is not engaged in rendering legal or tax advisory service. For advice or assistance in specific cases, the services of an attorney or other professional advisor should be obtained.
